anonymous	prefer not to answer since both are senior level		Early in my career, I was at a major game studio. The exec prod would get me wasted weekly to take advantage with sexual interactions. As far as I know no intercourse, but he has told others we did. My boss's response (well not sure if he hated me for other reasons, or directly this) would single me out and bully me. The abuse became so bad another (white male) team member went to HR. As there was another position open on another team, I asked our HR manager if I could apply. She looked up my file and said I was in good standing and I just needed to email and let my current boss know first. So I did, the next day I came in and was pulled into the HR office, I was put on a performance improvement plan even though I was employee of the month just a month prior. On the day they let me go (even though all my 1:1s were pos), I was told part of the reason was I looked visible distraught at my desk and people were taking notice.	I'm submitting anon here as I have every reason to be afraid for my career

LovindaTacos	Craig	Partnered Twitch streamer	I believe the accusation against LovinDaTacos and want to share my own experience. I am a very private person, so this will have to be anonymous. There were many red flags that I experienced in my interactions with LovinDaTacos. He offered to have me be his plus one at a partner party due to free alcoholic drinks, which he stated he doesn't drink so I could. I declined because I thought he was joking, but now I realize he wasn't. Someone in our same community mentioned how they distanced themselves from his stream team, but they didn't say exactly why. It was obvious they were disgusted though. In 2016, at TwitchCon, he mentioned he had a hotel room all alone to me, but I didn't go. He was very eager to talk to me often but in 2018's TwitchCon, I had brought my boyfriend and he blew me off when he found out. Now I know there were so many red flags and I am glad that nothing physical happened with me.

			I met Kyle through Instagram in 2018 when he reached out to me through Twitch Kittens, asking if I wanted to join. I was very excited to be talking to someone with such a huge following and so much knowledge about twitch and streaming. I thought I could learn a lot from him and the community. At the time I was with an abusive and manipulative partner that would control me and my stream. I confided in Kyle and found myself seeking his attention, and he was good at giving it to me. We had never physically met, but had been flirting casually and chatting for about two years. Twitch con 2019 was coming up and we had planned on meeting, we were both exited to finally meet. I knew he had a strange relationship with his ex, but he assured me they were only friends and I didn't fee trike prying into someone's personal life. We met at twitch con and immediately hit it off. He told me we couldn't hang out at his hotel because he was staying with his ex and I definitely thought that was odd, but shrugged it off. We ended up fooling around, and due to being drunk and convinced I went farther than I was comfortable with. The next night we hung out at a party and he introduced me to a bunch of his industry friends. I got a long really well with one of his friends and our conversation lasted longer than Kyle liked. He tried to pull me away and eventually found another girl to parade in front of me to make me jealous. I left once it got really creepy. The rest of the trip Kyle and I casually texted and talked but we didn't hang out after that. After the trip I kind of let all the creep stuff go and continued to talk to him about streaming and life and the normal things people talk about. I'm so ashamed for not acknowledging the sings and realizing how manipulative and creepy someone can be.

While at Gearbox (borderlands 2 time) he created fake job listings to get interviews with women, then attempt to try to sleep with them. One woman finally reached out to a recruiter to inquire about her application and found out the job listing wasn't real.

ImMrFlubaDub zaannzz Jump	Elliott alexander diaz Bil Carter	Pokemon/Animal Crossing Community MDL for OceanusGG csgo	It's taking me a whole lot of courage to write this but I feel like I need to speak out to protect myself and other potential victims. I really hope there are no other victims but it really wouldn't surprise me if there were. I have know ImMrFlubaDub (Elliott) for a number of years and considered him one of my best friends. He's an active member of the Pokémon community but I'm not sure how many people know him or have seen him around. I have trusted him with many of my personal issues. He was somebody that I basically trusted with my life. You would think that those kinds of people would never betray you. There are a lot of people that are very fake and cannot be trusted under any circumstances. Last year, Elliott came to Canada for a visit. We figured it was a good idea to finally meet in person after knowing each other for so many years. We got along very well and I was able to take him out to various places and give him a tour around the country that I love so much. A couple of days before he was suppose to go home, we were hanging out in my room. I was browsing the web on my laptop and he was suppose to be playing some video games. All of a sudden, he started touching me inappropriately. I told him several times to stop. I also told him before he flew over here that if he ever tried to do anything to me, he would be kicked out of my house. He continued to touch me and it ended up turning sexual. After he started to sexually abuse me, he proceeded to try and rape me. Luckily, I have been in this situation before (and he knew this) so I knew exactly how to defend myself. I was able to fend him off by kicking him in the testicles. The sad part about this is I've been through this 2 times before. Nobody should ever have to go through this at all. I told him everything about those past incidents and he used my hurtful past against me and tried to do the exact same thing to me. After this incident, he pretended like nothing ever happened. Everything was awkward as hell and all I wanted was for him to get the fuck out and go back home. When that day finally came, you have no idea how fucking overjoyed I was that I didn't have to see him anymore. Now, he's resorted to blocking me on every social media platform, acting like he's done nothing wrong. I'm the one who deals with the emotional trauma every single day and he gets to go on and live his life like nothing ever happened, like he's the good guy. To be honest, I blame myself for it. I should've noticed the red flags. 3 years ago, he was suspended from work because a woman made a sexual harassment allegation against him. I defended and believed him that he did nothing wrong. Now I wish I never did. I haven't said anything publicly until now because I don't want people thinking I'm doing this for attention. This is extremely painful to talk about and with my anxiety issues, I never wanted to speak about it. No person should ever be afraid to speak up. Living through this nightmare again is extremely painful and it's very upsetting. I've lived through this nightmare 3 different times now and I would never wish this pain on anybody. I'm writing this as a warning to people, especially females, who might be close to him. I'm not saying to stay away from him, I don't tell people how to run their lives. I'm just telling you to take extreme caution when dealing with him. I would not want you to end up in the same situation that I was in. Take caution of who you let into your life and don't trust anyone except yourself.
